

D21. What did you learn in school yesterday?

Even when there was a lot less of it, teaching American history was never simple. What we chose to teach, and how we chose to teach it, tells us as much about our present selves as about our past. Using American history textbooks as our viewfinder, we'll study the ways that educators, politicians, and religious leaders struggled for control of national narrative.

Date	Topics
3/29	Introduction and America's first century
4/5	The 20 th Century looks back
4/12	Wars, Hot and Cold
4/26	Left and right, differing style and substance
5/3	Contemporary Trends The Future of History

Slides and other reference material are available on <http://queenlake.com/wise/wise-spring-2019/what-did-you-learn-in-school-yesterday/>
Slides will be posted shortly before or after each class session

Karl Hakkarainen
kh@queenlake.com
508 829 5825